

LOUISVILLE JOURNAL

Port Royal and Dauphin — Port Royal is an island from the coast, in latitude 32° 8' S., 67½ miles southward of Charleston, and fifteen miles northeast of Vicksburg, and the Atlantic is between Edisto Island and Hilton Head Island, and at that point is about three miles wide. It is a great port, and Port Royal is called Port Royal and Port Royal. Running up the coast 20 miles, bending off eastward through the Coosaw River, and coming out to the Atlantic, is the Pee Dee River, which flows into the Pee Dee Sound, where we have an irregular area of about 25 miles by 15. This amphitheater region is cut up by numerous rivers, creeks, and inlets into a great number of islands, all of which are the chief of which are Fort Royal, St. Helena, Particular, Tuckaway, and Dathaway Islands. Along the coast of South Carolina, as far north as Georgia, and extending northward, there is a kind of natural network of the lands, seldom intersected except by roads or runaway negroes, who subdivide by hunting and fishing. At distant intervals there are shallow bays, and the streams, which are numerous, twice a day, swelling the natural lagoons and inundating the outlet of the fresh water stream. The date of that tract is 1693. Here is another:

"The Royal Naval Navy might ride with safety in Port Royal harbor. Its situation renders it an excellent station for a port of refuge in time of war." (Hewitt's South Carolina, 1790.)
